The most important thing I learned/experienced today was...

How to intervene.

It enhanced a lot of what I already learned from attending other training sessions such as Dr Diane Berjort. But it was very helpful to learn it from the developmental perspective.

How children are so resourceful in helping themselves in abusive situation.

The stages of learning. Learning trust leads to being honest able to go on to the next stage and so on. Home life is perceived as "normal".

Supporting families-means- Safety First at all costs

To look at the bigger picture and not just view what is visible.

How to handle children. Very Useful words and very good ideas.

You cant help every child but most. - Try to help to stop violence before it begins.

Frustration, irritability, anxiety-masked for depression. They might not see the situation is wrong or "unmoral" however behaviour may display it.

To be their for families, offer in my role understand, intervention, to really look beyond the surface. You really touched on my heart strings and brought tears to my house.

Children are very affected by violence and how they cant proceed to the next developmental/level like other children since affected by violence.

Kids come first. Supporting families means just not listening but introducing a choice for a change in the situation.

How what an impact this has on children and adults as they grow into adults.

No children are immune to the effects of the violence. They are susceptible at any age and even minor degrees of indirect violence can a large effect on kids. These problems will or can continue to affect them trough adulthood.

That all of the materials are available free of charge to share with families. Not a lot I didn't know but a refresher (from a refreshing presenter!) is always welcome!

How violence develop from infancy to adulthood. Report of all child .

Manifestations of domestic violence in children at different ages.

I find it very interesting to hear Gary speak of his interactions with families. I would like to thank him for all the very interesting informative interesting, information.

The development stages that children sees thought when violence occurs in there home. And how that affects them.

They passed the general law. Effects on children

I can use this information in my workplace to...

Safety of the child first and then the mother.

Incorporate into the child witness groups and in discussing in moms who don't understand some of there children's behaviours.

Helping mother in a abusive situation.

Help children that may be having problems and forward info to people that may be able to help.

First of all provide the website address to parents to educate themselves and get learning techniques on how to resolve family issues. Talk to children and not presume the negative because there's always other things that we are not aware of.

Help me recognize and understand the children better.

Keep in mind behaviours to look out for.

Reach out, understand and lead families towards intervention.

Yes it will help me out at work.

Support families, protect children.

Help families, referrals.

Understand : other" reasons for children to behaving the way they do, Appreciating severity of violence. Emphasize safety.

Validate the strategies I use with families who are living with domestic violence. I love the safety/structure/treatment triage...Very easy to remember.

Keeping children's safety.

Further identifying and support families and children at risk.

Help facilitate with parents importance of understanding the negative impacts this has on the children and into there future.

Certainly

Help children, educate parents

It may be difficult for me to use this information in my workplace because...

don't think it will be difficult to use at all

Always is a handy instruction to help others.

Its not in the scope of my practice(physiotherapy" to directly counsel children-but I still use the lessons indirectly safety is still priority.

It wont be.

Not at All.
